Collections which will boost the Shel-les County Tubercuiessa association's fund well over the halfway mark in the $92,000 campaign were anticipated in reports to be made Thursday after-noon when the 12 division end the third day's canvass. The sum secured up to Wednesday hight aggregated $24.484.50, augmented $10.702 by Wednesday's work.

Members of the executive committee innehed at the Hotel Cayono at noon Thursday when further plans incident to the details of the campaign were worked out. Plans now call for a whiri wind windup which will set the association over its goal. Several divisions have not yet reported and Marrin J. Condon, general chairman, sfully expected to see reports from these units materially advance the subscription list. At the noonday luncheon which will be a daily affair during the remainder of the week, members discussed various ways and plans whereby competition between divisions could be created and thus assign in bringing in funds. So far an ideal spirit has prevailed with a keen zeel displayed by different teams in putting forth efforts whereby their divisions would make better showing Directors of the campaign pointed out Thursday that this spirit promised to advance materially in the next day or so.

King's Team Leads.

The energy of W. R. King, chair-nan, of the wholesaic and commission fivision, classed as the third, Wednes-lay placed his outfit in the lead as re-tards sums turned in. Reports to head-markers, at 24 North Second street showed the king division as credited with $8,745, which figure displaced the umberman's division, under direction of R. L. Jurden, in leading position. The hird division secured $5,490 Wednes-lay.

Before he was 20 years of age Mr. Buckingham chose barthing as his life work and entered the old bestote hank then located on Madison avenue where his Hernando insurance company is now situated. His duties were those of a messenger boy. Early he showed aptitude in this profession and received offers from the old State National bank. His first connection with this institution was that of teller. His next step higher came with the resignation of the late Addison Hayes. Mr. Buckington was that of teller like next step higher came with the resignation of the state Addison Hayes. Mr. Buckington accepting him as eashier.

In 1898 he was elected president of the State National, a position which he held until the merger of 1912, which consolidated thes State National with the Central Bank and Trust company. Mr. Buckingham was then named head of the board of directors of the combined bank.

Vositions of responsibility and high board in various banking, associations have been accorded Mr. Buckingham on numerous occasions. He served several terms as president of the Tennessee Bankers association. He was likewise connected with the American Bankers association. Also Mr. Buckingham was at one time president of the Union Bell line and for years president of the time Bell line and for years president of the Memphis clearing house. At the time of this death he was actively connected with the Buckingham base at one time president of the Union Bell line and for years president of the Memphis clearing house. Except in the thinds flesh, where it was said by one union reader that the men 'had looked lorward to a 31 per sent increase,' and in Montana, where the district president said the minets would not return to work as long as soldiers remained in the coal fleids, the chief delay in resuming wirk today was expected to resum from district and leader awanting receipt of the telegram from the international officers nothlying them of the suding of the strike.

Generally the mines were in condition to be worked immediately. They had been kept in order by conservation crews left by the atrikers and the regular shifts of engineers and firemen.

National first exceeded $2,000,000, a figure at the time regarded as nothing short of marvelous. His policy, always a conservative one, was regarded by bankers and financiers throughout the South as an example. Many business men of Memphis today confrecal that not a few years ago men who now are leaders in commercial life here sought financial advice and aid of Mr. Buckingham and that he could then touch probably more business arteries than any other local banker at one time.

The first year's service of P D-leneke, as secretary of the Southern illuvial Land accountion, has just been rowned with the issuance of "The Call f the Aluvial Empire," a handsome lieutrated 64-page brochure, which excounds the wirtues of the South's producibly fertite alivial lands. Mr. leneke was ably acuted in the commitation of the articles and profusion of flustrations in the booklet by C. E. Collins, field secretary, and S. D. Fuon, memberahip secretary, of the land association.

fertility of the siluvial regions of Tenhesses. Arkansas. Mischsippi. and Louisiana, the "Nile valley of the new world."

The strikingly appropriate and beautiful cover of the bookiet is a photographic reproduction of a wheat field in natural colors. The wheat field from which the picture was made is owned by R. E. I. Wilson, of Wilson, Ark., a member of the association.

The articles in the bookiet and the many iffustrations are designed to demonstrate the almost endless variety of farm products which may be successfully grown in the alluvial region. The
